INTRODUCTION

During the 89 years that the National Labor Relations Act of 1935 (NLRA) has provided federal protection for collective bargaining rights, it has prohibited all agricultural workers from receiving that protection. With the stroke of a pen, one executive branch agency—Defendant Department of Labor (DOL)—has tried to undo this enduring compromise and sneak in through the backdoor what Congress has explicitly prohibited. DOL uses a ministerial authority under the Immigration and Naturalization Act (INA) to illegally provide collective bargaining rights to temporary, foreign-migrant farmworkers through the H-2A visa program. Meanwhile, American farmworkers are still barred from such protections under the NLRA. This is not only wrong, but also unlawful. It must be stopped. This Court should therefore grant the Plaintiffs a preliminary injunction and stay the effective date of the challenged rule under 5 U.S.C. § 705. In the alternative, Plaintiffs request a temporary restraining order until an injunction can be granted.

BACKGROUND

I. The National Labor Relations Act

In 1935, Congress passed the NLRA, which, among other things, established the right of certain employees to “self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concentrated activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.” 29 U.S.C. § 157. The NLRA was enacted as a compromise, in hopes to settle the divisive (sometimes violent) labor strife of previous decades. Since its inception, as part of that settlement, the NLRA has explicitly excluded agricultural workers from that statutory right. 29 U.S.C. § 152(3). That exception has stood for 89 years.

II. The H-2A Visa Program

The primary law governing immigration to and citizenship in the United States is the INA. In 1986, Congress Amended the INA with the Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA). Among the many things, IRCA created a special class of temporary, foreign-migrant agricultural workers. 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a). These workers receive H-2A visas.

The INA (including the IRCA amendments) is, obviously, an immigration statute. Naturally then, it is primarily administered by the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) (specifically, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS)). However, the Secretary of Labor does have a minor, ministerial duty under the statute: before USCIS can issue H-2A visas, she must certify that (1) there are not sufficient American or lawful permanent resident workers to perform the necessary work and (2) foreign workers will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of workers in the United States who are similarly employed. 8 U.S.C. § 1188(a)(1). The purpose of this certification authority is to ensure that there is no other choice but to use foreign workers to perform the jobs for which H-2A authorization is sought. This ultimately protects the welfare of American workers by reserving H-2A visas only for situations where there are no American workers to be had.

III. The Final Rule

On April 29, 2024, Defendants published their Final Rule: Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States, 89 Fed. Reg. 33,898 (Apr. 29, 2024).

Several of the provisions of the rule illegally mirror provisions of the NLRA that protect collective bargaining rights. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 157-58. For example, the Final Rule requires that “with respect to any person engaged in agriculture...the employer has not and will not...discharge, or in any manner discriminate against...any person who has engaged in activities related to self-organization,” which includes “any effort to form, join, or assist a labor organization.” 89 Fed. Reg. 34,062. This mirrors 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(1) and (2) of the NLRA, which prevent employers from interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in exercising their rights to form, join or assist labor organizations.

The Final Rule also requires employers to refrain from discriminating in any manner against an employee who “refused to attend an employer sponsored meeting with the employer...if the primary purpose of the meeting is to communicate the employer’s opinion concerning any activity protected in this subpart; or has refused to listen to employer-sponsored speech or view employer-sponsored communications, the primary purpose of which is to communicate the employer’s opinion concerning any activity protected by this subpart.” 89 Fed. Reg. 34,063. This overlaps significantly with the provision of the NLRA which deems it an unfair labor practice by an employer if they, “by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization.” 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(3).

The Final Rule further requires employers to “permit workers to designate a representative” in certain disciplinary meetings. 89 Fed. Reg. 34,011. It further requires employers to “permit a worker to designate a representative to attend any investigatory interview that the worker reasonably believes might result in disciplinary action and must permit the worker to receive advice and active assistance from the designated representative during any such investigatory interview.” Id. at 34,063. This overlaps with 29 U.S.C. § 159(a) of the NLRA, which requires employers to allow employee representatives to be present when dealing with issues such as “pay, wages, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment.”

In addition, the Final Rule includes the same prohibitions that appear in the NLRA governing “other concerted activities for the purpose of mutual aid or protection relating to wages or working conditions.” See 89 Fed. Reg. 34,063; 29 U.S.C. § 157.

The Final Rule purports to protect a range of concerted activities, including secondary boycotts and pickets. 89 Fed. Reg. 33,997. For example, the Final Rule states “a group of workers engaged in a labor dispute who meet with the management of a grocery store to explain their labor dispute and seek to persuade the store to stop carrying the products sold by the workers’ employer until the labor dispute is resolved would be engaged in protected concerted activity” and announces DOL’s intention “to interpret the terms ‘concerted activity’ broadly, to include concerted activities for the broad purpose of ‘mutual aid or protection’ as well as for the narrower purpose of ‘self-organization,’ as long as the object of the activity is related to the workers’ own wages and working conditions.” Id. at 34,007. This arguably goes further than the NLRA in that it allows what would be an unfair labor practice by a labor organization. See 29 U.S.C. § 158(b)(4).

Also, unrelated to the NLRA but a major provision of the Final Rule nonetheless is its alteration of the terms of payment due to H-2A workers. Specifically it changes the effective date of the annual Adverse Effect Wage Rate (AEWR)—one of the measures used to determine the wage owed to an H-2A worker. 89 Fed. Reg. 34,060. Whereas increases in the AEWR used to take effect on January 1 of the upcoming year, the Final Rule put the changes into effect upon publication of the AEWR in the Federal Register, which usually occurs around December 14. Id. at 34,048-49, 34,060.

LEGAL STANDARD

Generally, “[a] plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish that he is likely to succeed on the merits, that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest.” Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). “Likelihood of success on the merits ‘is generally the most important of the four factors.’” Am. All. for Equal Rts. v. Fearless Fund

ARGUMENT

I. Plaintiffs are Likely to Succeed on the Merits of their Claims

Plaintiffs satisfy the most important factor: likelihood of success. Under the Administrative Procedure Act (APA), a court must “hold unlawful and set aside agency action, findings, and conclusions” that are “in excess of statutory jurisdiction, authority, or limitations, or short of statutory right,” or “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law...” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A), (C). And Plaintiffs can plainly show that Defendants acted both arbitrarily and in excess of their lawful authority in adopting the Final Rule.

A. The Final Rule is Not in Accordance with Law

The Final Rule is not in accordance with law because (1) it violates the NLRA, (2) it exceeds DOL's limited authority under the IRCA amendment to the INA, and (3) to the extent there is any ambiguity in the statute, DOL's interpretation is not entitled to any deference.

1. The Final Rule Violates the NLRA

The Final Rule is not in accordance with law because it violates the NLRA. As explained above, the NLRA expressly excludes agricultural workers from its definition of employee. 29 U.S.C. § 152(3); Caro-Galvan v. Curtis Richardson, Inc., 993 F.2d 1500, 1507 (11th Cir. 1993). By purporting to provide workers with various collective bargaining and organizations rights, the Final Rule thus violates the NLRA. Importantly, nothing in the text or history of IRCA suggests that Congress intended to repeal or modify the relevant provisions of the NLRA. Agri Processor

Co. v. NLRB, 514 F.3d 1, 7 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (noting “all available evidence” indicates that Congress did not intend for IRCA to amend or repeal the NLRA).

Defendants appear to understand this is a problem. But they seem to think they can avoid it simply by waving their hands and claiming that the Final Rule does not provide a right to unionize or collectively bargain. 89 Fed. Reg. 33,991. But if it looks like a duck and quacks like a duck, then it’s probably a duck. Although Defendants studiously avoid explicitly saying that H-2A workers can unionize or collectively bargain, the Final Rule’s protections are near copies of those in the NLRA.

For example, the overarching protection the Final Rule provides H-2A workers is protection for “‘concerted activity for mutual aid and protection’ which encompasses numerous ways that workers can engage, individually or collectively, to enforce their rights.” 89 Fed. Reg. 34,005. The Final Rule also requires “with respect to any person engaged in agriculture...the employer has not and will not...discharge, or in any manner discriminate against...any person who has engaged in activities related to self-organization,” which includes “any effort to form, join, or assist a labor organization.” 89 Fed. Reg. at 34,062 (emphasis added).

These provisions mirror the NLRA, which protects a qualifying worker’s “right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.” 29 U.S.C. § 157. In addition, 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(1) says it’s an unfair labor practice “to interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 157 of this title.” Defendants cannot hide behind linguistic smoke and mirrors. They are doing what the NLRA clearly forbids:

including agriculture workers under the NLRA and also providing federal protections for (a certain subset of) agricultural workers<sup>1</sup> to unionize.

2. The Final Rule Exceeds the DOL's Statutory Authority Under the INA/IRCA.

Defendants also cannot claim the IRCA amendment to the INA authorizes the Final Rule because their authority under the INA is limited. It is axiomatic that “an agency literally has no power to act... unless and until Congress confers power upon it.” La. Pub. Serv. Comm'n v. FCC (LPSC), 476 U.S. 355, 357 (1986); see also Bayou Lawn & Landscape Servs. v. Sec'y of Labor, 713 F.3d 1080, 1084 (11th Cir. 2013) (“[A]n agency’s power to promulgate legislative regulations is limited to the authority delegated to it by Congress...” (citation omitted)) (citing Bowen v. Georgetown Univ. Hosp., 488 U.S. 204, 208 (1988)). The best way to determine whether Congress conferred power upon an agency “is to examine the nature and scope of the authority granted by Congress to the agency.” LPSC, 476 U.S. at 357. To do so, courts look to the relevant statutory text because “[t]he authority of administrative agencies is constrained by the language of the statute they administer.” Texas v. United States, 497 F.3d 491, 500–01 (5th Cir. 2007) (citing Massachusetts v. EPA, 549 U.S. 497 (2007)). If an agency issues a rule without statutory authority, then the rule is unlawful and should be vacated. See Bayou Lawn, 713 F.3d at 1080.<sup>2</sup>

Turning to the matter at hand, it is important to note that DOL lacks any general rulemaking authority under the INA. Other federal officers have such generalized authority,

<sup>1</sup> As noted above, H-2A visa holders are, by their very nature, agricultural workers; the visa is only available for that sort of worker. 8 U.S.C. § 1188(i)(2) (citing definition in 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a)).

<sup>2</sup> Although the case held that Defendants have rulemaking authority for the H-2A program under 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a) that provision is limited to defining “agricultural or labor services” and not a general grant of rulemaking over the entire program.

including the Attorney General and the Secretary of Homeland Security, see 8 U.S.C. § 1103. But the Secretary of Labor is conspicuously absent from this broad grant of authority. Rather, she has only limited, specific grants of authority within the statutory scheme. Specifically, the INA gives the Secretary of Labor the regulatory authority to:

- define “agricultural labor services,” 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a);
- set fees for the processing of H-2A certification applications, id. § 1188(a)(2); and
- “issue regulations which address the specific requirements of housing for employees principally engaged in the range production of livestock,” id. § 1188(c)(4).

Yet 8 U.S.C. § 1188(a)(1)—the supposed authority for the Final Rule<sup>3</sup>—lacks any statement regarding the Secretary of Labor issuing regulations. All that subsection does is allow the Secretary of Labor to issue the necessary certifications allowing an employer to hire workers on an H-2A visa. The affirmative grant of rulemaking authority in other parts of the INA thus imply the absence of rulemaking authority elsewhere—including under § 1188(a)(1). See Bittner v. United States, 143 S. Ct. 713, 720 (2023); see also Bayou Lawn, 713 F.3d at 1085 (“[I]f congressional silence is a sufficient basis upon which an agency may build a rulemaking authority, the relationship between the executive and legislative branches would undergo a fundamental change and agencies would enjoy virtually limitless hegemony....” (internal quotes omitted)).

<sup>3</sup> See 89 Fed. Reg. 33,901 (“the Department believes that these protections are important to prevent adverse effect on the working conditions of workers in the United States similarly employed. 8 U.S.C. 1188\(a\)\(1\)); 89 Fed. Reg. 33,970-1 (noting that DOL “has long maintained that regulating the employment decisions made by an employer using the H-2A program is necessary to achieve statutory objectives—specifically, to ensure that H-2A workers are employed only when there are insufficient qualified, able, and available U.S. workers to complete the work, and to ensure that the employment of H-2A workers does not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of workers in the United States similarly employed, see 8 U.S.C. 1188\(a\)\(1\)—and has a long history of regulating in this space.”); 89 Fed. Reg. 33972 (“The Department therefore has a responsibility pursuant to 8 U.S.C. 1188\(a\)\(1\) to ensure that an employer is relieved of these obligations only in situations where the employer has sufficient justification to terminate a worker for cause.”).

Indeed, the Eleventh Circuit has already rejected a similar attempt to expand DOL’s regulatory authority under the INA. In Bayou Lawn, the agency claimed that a provision requiring the DHS to “consult” with DOL gave DOL the authority to, essentially, regulate on any topic on which it was to be consulted, so as “to structure its consultation with DHS.” 713 F.3d at 1084. Yet the Circuit Court called this “an absurd reading of the statute” and rejected it, holding that DOL had no authority to issue rules on the matters it had attempted to regulate in that case. Id.

The Secretary of Labor has only a narrow role under § 1188(a)(1); she must consider two questions: (1) whether “there are...sufficient workers who are able, willing, and qualified, and who will be available at the time and place needed, to perform the labor or services involved in the petition,” and (2) whether “the employment of...alien[s] in such labor or services will...adversely affect the wages and working conditions of workers in the United States similarly employed.” Id. Section 1188(a)(1) is not a grant of general rulemaking authority over the H-2A program as a whole. Rather, DOL’s role in the H-2A program is limited, straightforward, and clear. The explicit authority given is the authority of “certification.” To certify something means to attest authoritatively.<sup>4</sup> Just as “consultation” could not be read to extend into rulemaking authority in Bayou Lawn, neither can “certification” provide such authority here. To hold otherwise would be “an absurd reading of the statute,” 713 F.3d at 1084.

But even if there were a silent-but-somehow-implied authority for DOL to issue rules under § 1188(a)(1), such authority would have to be exceptionally limited. The statute focuses DOL on a single concern: prioritizing the needs of domestic workers. See Alfred L. Snapp & Son, Inc.

v. Puerto Rico, ex rel. Barez, 458 U.S. 592, 596 (1982); Mendoza v. Perez, 754 F.3d 1002, 1017 (D.C. Cir. 2014). “H-2A workers are not the intended beneficiaries of substantive rights granted by the statute,” and “courts have declined to imply a right of action to enforce the minimal conditions established by the H-2A visa program.” Kara E. Stockdale, H-2A Migrant Agricultural Workers: Protected from Employer Exploitation on Paper, Not in Practice, 46 CREIGHTON L. REV. 755, 776 (2013) (citation omitted). Rather than prioritizing domestic workers, the Final Rule subordinates their interests to foreign workers.

The statute also requires DOL to certify that American domestic workers will not be “adversely affect[ed]” by alien labor. 8 U.S.C. § 1188(a)(1)(B). This requirement does not authorize DOL to seek to expand or improve the wages or working conditions of workers—domestic or foreign.

The pre-split Fifth Circuit outlined the scope of DOL’s authority in this regard in Williams v. Usery, 531 F.2d 305 (5th Cir. 1976). In that case, the court rejected an argument that a similar provision of the pre-amendment INA authorized DOL to set wages sufficient to “attract domestic workers,” concluding that the argument reflected a “misunderstanding of the nature of the regulatory scheme authorized under the [INA].” Id. The court acknowledged that while some may think it desirable for DOL to afford workers greater benefits, DOL lacks the legal authority to do so and has “no authority to set a wage rate on the basis of attractiveness to workers.” Id. Instead, the Court held that DOL has only “limited” authority to make “an economic determination of what rate must be paid all workers to neutralize any ‘adverse effect’ resultant from the influx of temporary foreign workers.”<sup>5</sup> Id. In summarizing the scope of DOL’s

<sup>5</sup> Neither Williams—nor its companion case Florida Sugar Cane League, Inc. v. Usery, 531 F.2d 299 (1976)—challenged the DOL’s authority to issue regulations at all. Florida Sugar Cane, however, notes that the DOL’s regulatory authority was premised on a “consultation” provision. 531 F.2d authority, the Court stated that the Secretary of Labor’s “authority to insure against a lowering of wages is hardly synonymous with the affirmative power to raise wages.” Id.

Similarly, DOL’s authority to guard against the “adverse effect” of alien labor under § 1188(a)(1) does not include an affirmative power to raise wages or improve working conditions. On the contrary, insofar as the DOL has any regulatory authority under § 1188(a)(1), it is limited to neutralizing adverse effect from a potential influx of foreign workers. Accord Williams, 531 F.2d at 306.

And although this conclusion is apparent from the text of the statute itself, the legislative history of IRCA confirms that Congress was chiefly concerned about protecting domestic workers. See generally Mendoza, 754 F.2d at 1017 (discussing the text of IRCA and the legislative history of the INA). Thus, both the text and history of the statute indicate that Congress granted DOL only a limited role in the H-2A program. Accord Bayou Lawn, 713 F.3d at 1084–85 (rejecting argument that “text, structure and object” of INA granted DOL rulemaking powers). The Final Rule exceeds this limited role by providing attractive benefits to foreign workers (indeed, more attractive than what the NLRA requires for domestic workers).

In sum, nothing in the IRCA amendments to the INA gives Defendants the authority for the Final Rule.

3. Defendants’ Position Is Not Entitled to Deference

at 300. Thus, any implicit finding that DOL had regulatory authority is of questionable validity after Bayou Lawn—especially given the statutory changes that came to the INA with the IRCA amendments (the visa program that Williams and Florida Sugar Cane addressed does not even exist anymore). Williams is cited merely to show that, even if there is some silent, implied regulatory authority under § 1188(a)(1), it must be exercised with a much closer tie to the statutory language than what Defendants have proffered here.

To the extent DOL argues that its contrary view is entitled to some form of Chevron deference, this Court should reject that argument for multiple reasons. First, DOL is not entitled to deference because the intent of Congress in this case is clear. See Koch Foods, Inc. v. Sec’y, U.S. Dep’t of Lab., 712 F.3d 476, 480 (11th Cir. 2013) (“Where the court finds that the statute is clear, as it does here, no deference is accorded to the agency’s interpretation.”); Legal Env’tl Assistance Found., Inc. v. EPA, 118 F.3d 1467, 1474 (11th Cir. 1997) (“It is only after we have determined that words used by Congress are ambiguous, or that Congress left a gap in the statutory language, that we turn to the agency’s interpretation of these words to ascertain whether it deserves any deference.”). Congress has spoken directly on the question of whether agricultural workers fall under the NLRA. Congress clearly did not intend to provide foreign agricultural workers with these types of benefits through an IRCA back door.

Second, DOL is not entitled to deference because it does not administer immigration laws. See Adams Fruit Co., Inc. v. Barrett, 494 U.S. 638, 649 (1990) (“A precondition to deference under Chevron is a congressional delegation of administrative authority.”); see also Dep’t of the Navy v. Fed. Labor Relations Auth., 836 F.2d 1409, 1410 (3d Cir. 1988) (“[A]n agency decision is not entitled to...deference when it interprets another agency’s statute...”).<sup>6</sup>

The Final Rule is contrary to law and the Plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of this argument.

B. The Final Rule Violates the Major Questions Doctrine

<sup>6</sup> Depending on how the Supreme Court answers the question presented in Loper Bright Enters. v. Raimondo, 143 S. Ct. 2429 (2023) (granting certiorari on “[w]hether the Court should overrule Chevron or at least clarify that statutory silence concerning controversial powers expressly but narrowly granted elsewhere in the statute does not constitute an ambiguity requiring deference to the agency”), there might not be any deference to agency interpretation at all.

The Final Rule triggers the major questions doctrine. Over the past several years, the Supreme Court has applied a new label to a doctrine that has developed over decades—the major questions doctrine. Biden v. Nebraska, 143 S.Ct. 2355, 2374 (2023) Error! Bookmark not defined. (quoting West Virginia v. EPA, 597 U.S. 697, 724 (2022)). This doctrine requires “clear congressional authorization” for agency action in cases where an agency invokes broad authority over matters of great economic and political significance. See West Virginia, 597 U.S. at 724. A variety of circumstances may trigger the application of the doctrine, including the sheer economic or political impact of the agency action. See, e.g., Nebraska, 143 S.Ct. at 2375 (concluding doctrine applies to a “mass [student] debt cancellation program”); West Virginia, 597 U.S. at 724-25 (concluding doctrine applies to EPA regulation that would “substantially restructure the American energy market”).

Although these considerations “need not be present in every major-questions case, they are among the things that cause [a court] to hesitate and look for clear congressional authorization before proceeding.” N.C. Coastal Fisheries Reform Grp. v. Capt. Gaston LLC, 76 F.4th 291, 297 (4th Cir. 2023). It ultimately boils down to “common sense as to the manner in which Congress is likely to delegate a policy decision of such economic and political magnitude to an administrative agency,” FDA v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 529 U.S. 120, 133 (2000), and goes back to the fundamental idea that Congress legislates on “important subjects” while delegating to “fill up the details,” Wayman v. Southard, 23 U.S. (10 Wheat.) 1, 43 (1825).

The major questions doctrine applies when an agency undertakes action in which “a decision of such magnitude and consequence rests with Congress itself, or an agency acting pursuant to clear delegation from that representative body.” West Virginia, 597 U.S. at 735. A “colorable” or “plausible” textual basis is not sufficient to clearly authorize the agency action. Id. at 722. This is because Congress does not “hide elephants in mouseholes.” Whitman v. Am. Trucking

Ass'n, 531 U.S. 457, 468 (2001). Although no precise formula exists to demonstrate clear authorization, the factors a court may look to include: (1) where the statutory provision the agency relies on fits within the broader statutory scheme, (2) “the age and focus of the statute the agency invokes in relation to the problem the agency seeks to address,” and (3) “the agency’s past interpretations of the relevant statute.” West Virginia, 597 U.S. at 746–48 (Gorsuch, J., concurring) (citation omitted). In reviewing factors like these, the burden is on the agency to demonstrate that it has clear authorization. See Nebraska, 143 S.Ct. at 2375. This requires viewing actions in their proper context and utilizing a certain degree of common sense. Id. at 2379 (Barrett, J., concurring).

I. This is a Major Questions Doctrine Case

The major questions doctrine applies here because the Final Rule is politically significant. This is so for three reasons. First, it seeks to answer a question “of vast... political significance.” West Virginia, 597 U.S. at 716 (quotation marks omitted). The United States has long—and often intensely—debated the conditions upon which workers can or should unionize. The right to collective bargaining in the United States came in 1935 through the NLRA after decades of contentious relationships between labor and management.<sup>7</sup> Cf. Texas v. Nuclear Regulatory Comm’n, 78 F.4th 827, 844 (5th Cir. 2023) (nuclear waste disposal is major question

<sup>7</sup> “The Labor-Management truce during World War I evaporated after the armistice in 1918. The following year, unions lost major strikes in the steel, coal, and rail industries. Union membership dropped from more than five million members in 1920 to three million members in 1933—just 300,000 more than in 1914. Hostility between labor and management ran high in the 1920s.” Nat’l Lab. Relations Bd., Pre-Wagner Act Labor Relations, <https://www.nlrb.gov/about-nlrb/who-we-are/our-history/pre-wagner-act-labor-relations> (last visited June 13, 2024). “In the 1930s, workers had begun to organize militantly, and in 1933 and 1934, a great wave of strikes occurred across the nation in the form of citywide general strikes and factory takeovers. Violent confrontations occurred between workers trying to form unions and the police and private security forces defending the interests of anti-union employers.” Nat’l Archives, Milestone Documents, National Labor Relations Act (1935), <https://www.archives.gov/milestone-documents/national-labor-relations-act> (last visited June 13, 2024).

because it “has been hotly politically contested for over a half century”). This included violent uprisings such as the Colorado Coal Field Strike and War of 1913-1914 in which coalminers engaged in violent warfare against Rockefeller-owned Colorado Fuel and Iron, resulting in 75 to 100 deaths. Thomas G. Andrews, Killing for Coal: America’s Deadliest Labor War 14 (2009); Sandra Dallas, “Killing for Coal” Mines History of Labor in West, Denver Post, Feb. 15, 2009, at E12, available at <https://www.denverpost.com/2009/02/12/killing-for-coal-mines-history-of-labor-in-west/>; Library of Congress, Colorado Coalfield War: Topics in Chronicling America, <https://guides.loc.gov/chronicling-america-colorado-coalfield-war> (last visited June 13, 2024).

The NLRA was designed to calm these tensions by codifying worker protections into federal law through a series of delicate compromises that may have fully satisfied no one but gave everyone enough to secure the peace. See Pub. L. No. 74-198, § 1, ¶ 3, 49 Stat. 449, 449 (1935) (“Experience has proved that protection by law of the right of employees to organize and bargain collectively safeguards commerce from injury, impairment, or interruption, and promotes the flow of commerce by removing certain recognized sources of industrial strife and unrest, by encouraging practices fundamental to the friendly adjustment of industrial disputes arising out of differences as to wages, hours, or other working conditions, and by restoring equality of bargaining power between employers and employees.”).

The NLRA was not a minor portion of an appropriations bill. It was serious legislation aimed at combatting a national problem. The excision of agricultural workers from the NLRA represents an obvious and deliberate compromise that arose out of competing interests debated by Congress. That settlement has stood the test of time as it has been the law of the land for 89 years and any changes to it would certainly be an issue of vast political significance. In other words, Congress has long known of this issue, yet still taken no action to fold agricultural workers into the NLRA. See generally Gulf Fishermens Ass’n v. Nat’l Marine Fisheries Serv., 968 F.3d 454, 465 (5th Cir. 2020) (observing that congressional inaction, despite awareness of the issue, was “fundamental problem with the agency’s position”).

Making the topic hotter still, the Final Rule represents the intersection of labor rights and immigration, possibly the most politically significant topic in 2024. Polling data shows there is great debate among Americans about immigration (both legal and illegal) into this country and the conditions under which someone can enter the country.<sup>8</sup> Regulations that grant foreign workers more collective-bargaining protections than their American counterparts would settle a controversial issue with serious arguments on both sides. That is something only Congress can decide. Yet Defendants have circumvented that process, taking it upon themselves to decide an aspect of that contentious, complicated issue absent congressional input.

Also noteworthy here is that the proposed version of the Final Rule elicited thousands of impassioned comments from organizations and individuals across the country. “Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States,” <https://www.regulations.gov/docket/ETA-2023-0003/comments> (last visited June 11, 2024), as well as the attention of members of Congress<sup>9</sup> and major media outlets, Adam Shaw, Republicans

Warn Biden Admin's Foreign Farm Worker Rule Is 'Giveaway to Big Labor,' Fox News (Nov. 15, 2023), <https://www.foxnews.com/politics/republicans-warn-biden-admins-foreign-farm-worker-rule-is-giveaway-to-big-labor>. Thus, whether or the extent to which H-2A workers should receive unionization protections is plainly “the subject of an earnest and profound debate across the country,” Gonzales v. Oregon, 546 U.S. 243, 267 (2006) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

In addition, this Final Rule “intrudes into an area that is the particular domain of state law.” Ala. Ass’n of Realtors, 594 U.S. at 764. When a regulation implicates “areas traditionally regulated by the States,” “courts must be certain of Congress’s intent” due to the federalism concerns present. Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 469–60 (1991); West Virginia, 597 U.S. at 746–48 (Gorsuch, J., concurring) (internal quotations omitted) (“[C]ourts must be certain of Congress’s intent before finding that it legislate[d] in areas traditionally regulated by the States.”). Coastal Fisheries, 76 F.4th at 297 (requiring clear showing of authority when “the asserted power raises federalism concerns”).

And, indeed, the collective bargaining rights of agricultural workers have been traditionally regulated by the States—Congress’ express exclusion of agricultural workers from the NLRA has necessarily made it so. Over the past 89 years, states have moved to fill that void and regulated agricultural workers in a different manner than other workers when it comes to collective bargaining rights. For example, in Kansas it is unlawful for agricultural workers to “engage in a strike during periods of marketing of livestock or during a critical period of production or harvesting of crops.” K.S.A. 44-828(c)(6). Other states have similar statutes. See, e.g. Ariz. Stat. § 23-1381; Wisc. Stat. 111.115. There are good reasons for states to have these laws. For example, labor strikes during peak harvesting season for perishable crops threaten the state’s food supply. But these laws conflict with the Final Rule. The Final Rule states that DOL intends “to interpret the terms ‘concerted activity’ broadly, to include concerted activities for the broad purpose of ‘mutual aid or protection’ as well as for the narrower purpose of ‘self-organization,’ as long as the object of the activity is related to the workers’ own wages and working conditions.” 89 Fed. Reg. 34,007. The Final Rule places no limitation on when this concerted activity can occur, and any H-2A employer risks liability if they follow state law on the matter.

Defendants seek to unilaterally override a domain that has been exclusively regulated by the states for at least the past 89 years. As the Supreme Court has observed, when Congress wishes to “significantly alter the balance between federal and state power,” it must employ “exceedingly clear language.” Forest Serv. v. Cowpasture River Preservation Ass’n, 590 U.S. 604, 622 (2020).

2. Defendants Lack Clear Statutory Authorization

Because the Final Rule implicates a major question, Defendants must point to clear authorization from Congress. See West Virginia, 142 S. Ct at 2614 (quoting UARG v. EPA, 573 U.S. 302, 324 (2014)). A “plausible” or “colorable” textual basis is not enough. Defendants have the burden of demonstrating clear authorization. But, for several reasons, they cannot meet it.

An important reason relates to where the legislative provision the Department relies on fits within the broader statutory scheme. See West Virginia, 597 U.S. at 746 (Gorsuch, J., concurring) (noting that courts examine legislative provisions “with a view to their place in the overall statutory scheme” and cautioning against reliance on general and gap-filler language (quoting Brown v. Williamson, 529 U.S. at 133)); see also Coastal Fisheries, 76 F.4th at 297 (noting “hallmark” of major questions cases is “when the Act’s structure indicates that Congress did not mean to regulate the issue in the way claimed”). The Department relies on 8 U.S.C. § 1188(a)(1) as its authority to promulgate the Final Rule. 89 Fed. Reg. at 33,899; accord 88 Fed. Reg. at 63,751

(Sept. 15, 2023). But 8 U.S.C. § 1188(a)(1) is part of the IRCA amendments to the INA. The INA is “lengthy and complex.” U. S. ex rel. Carson v. Kershner, 228 F.2d 142, 147 (6th Cir. 1955), rev’d on other grounds sub nom. Lehmann v. U.S. ex rel. Carson, 353 U.S. 685 (1957). And its administration is overseen by the Attorney General and the Secretary of Homeland Security. See, e.g., 8 U.S.C. § 1103. In other words, § 1188(a)(1) is a small provision of a major statutory scheme administered or overseen by officials in different executive departments. And that small provision assigns to the DOL a mere ministerial function—issuing certifications to H-2A employers.<sup>10</sup> The Final Rule therefore represents a “transformative expansion in [the DOL’s] regulatory authority.” Utility Air Regulatory Grp. v. EPA (UARG), 573 U.S. 302, 324 (2014). It is highly unlikely that Congress would have hidden authorization for such a consequential change within this ministerial function.

Turning to the age and focus of 8 U.S.C. § 1188(a)(1), it is a 37-year-old statute focused on protecting American workers, not foreign workers. It says that the Attorney General “may not” approve petitions to import H-2A workers “unless the petitioner has applied to the Secretary of Labor for a certification that... there are not sufficient workers [already available]... and [that] the employment of the alien... will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of workers in the United States similarly employed.” Id. (emphasis added). Notwithstanding the focus of § 1188(a)(1), the Final Rule focuses on conferring benefits on migrants, and only in a roundabout way considers the plight of American workers. See 89 Fed. Reg. at 33,987.

Finally, Defendants have never previously asserted authority under 1188(a)(1) to protect collective bargaining rights. Yet, 37 years later—and without reasonable explanation—the

<sup>10</sup> And even that authority is secondary to the Attorney General’s overriding authority. The DOL can issue the required certifications, and the Attorney General cannot approve the importation of H-2A workers without that certification, but the ultimate approval still lies within the Attorney General’s discretion. See § 1188(a)(1).

Department suddenly posits that § 1188(a)(1) gives them the authority to override almost 90 years of settled law. Although past unchallenged practice does not in itself give rise to a presumption of illegality, the fact that no such practice exists is telling. See West Virginia, 597 U.S. at 748 (Gorsuch, J., concurring). It demonstrates that Defendants did not suddenly find authority that's been hiding for 37 years but instead are attempting to seize new power beyond the bounds of their limited statutory delegation.

In sum, the Final Rule deals with a subject of vast political and federalism significance. Because of that, Defendants have the burden of demonstrating that they have clear authorization from Congress to promulgate it. They can't. Therefore, the Final Rule violates the major questions doctrine.

C. The Final Rule is Arbitrary and Capricious.

A decision is arbitrary and capricious if:

the factors the agency relied on were not what Congress would intend, if the agency entirely failed to consider an important aspect of the problem, if the agency offered an explanation counter to the evidence before the agency, or if the agency action is so implausible that it could not be ascribed to a difference in view or the product of agency expertise.

Florida v. Dep't of Health & Human Servs., 19 F.4th 1271, 1290 (11th Cir, 2021) (internal citations omitted). Although this standard is deferential to the agency, courts "are not a rubber stamp." In re Gateway Radiology Consultants, P.A., 983 F.3d 1239, 1263 (11th Cir. 2020).

In this case, Defendants (1) relied on factors that were not what Congress would intend, (2) came up with an implausible explanation for its actions that could not be ascribed to difference in views or the product of agency expertise, and (3) took a sharp departure from past practice without reasonable explanation.

I. Reliance on Factors Congress Did Not Intend

Defendants' explanation for the Final Rule relies on factors Congress did not intend for the agency to rely on—because it had already spoken on the issue of collective bargaining protections for agricultural workers. Yet the Final Rule strongly considers the importance of unionization within the agricultural workforce and the harm these workers have endured without union protections.<sup>11</sup> But given Congress' explicit statement on the issue, that could not have been something it intended Defendants to consider.

The Final Rule also focuses heavily on the protection of foreign workers.<sup>12</sup> However, prevention of foreign migrant laborer exploitation is not a factor that Congress intended DOL to consider under 8 U.S.C 1188(a)(1). Congress wanted the agency's focus to be on whether “the employment of the alien in such labor or services will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of workers in the United States similarly employed.” 8 U.S.C. § 1188(a)(1)(B) (emphasis added). And Congress wanted Defendants to ensure that before an H-2A worker is hired “there are not sufficient workers who are able, willing, and qualified, and who will be available at the time and place needed, to perform the labor or services involved in the petition.” 8 U.S.C. § 1188(a)(1)(A).

<sup>11</sup> See, e.g., 89 Fed. Reg. 33,992 (“the Department seeks to prevent adverse effect on similarly employed workers by ensuring that workers have the tools to ensure that their rights under the H-2A program are not violated and to advocate regarding the terms and conditions of their employment, on more equal footing with similarly employed workers in the United States. Though such similarly employed workers may be excluded from the NLRA's protections, they may be less likely to face the unique vulnerabilities and forms of retaliation experienced by H-2A workers described above.”).

<sup>12</sup> See, e.g., 89 Fed. Reg. 33,968 (“Failure to clearly and fully disclose any available overtime pay in the job order harms prospective workers who may be more interested in the job opportunity if they are aware of the availability of overtime pay.”); 89 Fed. Reg. 33,934 (“the Department believes that its interest in protecting workers from the harmful, potentially dangerous situations giving rise to immediate discontinuation outweighs any burden employers may experience while services are discontinued.”); 89 Fed. Reg. 33,040 (“delayed start dates are harmful to workers, who value predictability and certainty in employment start dates.”).

The Final Rule addresses these considerations only in a roundabout way and places the primary focus on benefits to H-2A workers (and by extension the unions who increase their membership with H-2A workers).<sup>13</sup> In doing so, Defendants create a situation where foreign workers have better conditions than their American counterparts. No matter how many ways Defendants try to spin the collective bargaining rights for H-2A workers as a benefit to Americans, the reality is that American farmworkers are still prohibited by statute from receiving federal protection for collective bargaining.

Therefore, further unionization of H-2A workers cannot have the impact they say it does on American wages and working conditions because domestic farmworkers are denied that protection. Any benefit to American farmworkers would be speculative at best, and Defendants do not point to any data to support this speculative conclusion. This is not an explanation based on a difference in view or a product of agency expertise. It is simply an attempt to accomplish something Congress explicitly forbade through the rulemaking process. As a result, the Final Rule considers factors Congress did not intend for it to rely on and provided an explanation so implausible that it cannot be ascribed to a difference in view or a product of agency expertise.

2. Implausible Explanation

For similar reasons, Defendants explain their actions in a manner that is implausible, to say the least. The Final Rule effectively provides NLRA rights to H-2A workers. These are rights that American farmworkers explicitly do not have under federal law. Instead of saying

<sup>13</sup> See, e.g., 89 Fed. Reg. 33,991 (“The Department concludes that these provisions [including “safeguard collective action”], which safeguard worker voice and empowerment, will prevent adverse effect on similarly employed workers in the United States by alleviating some of the barriers H-2A workers face when raising complaints about violations of their rights under the program and advocating regarding working conditions.”).

this, Defendants try to make it appear that this benefits American farmworkers through some odd, not-fully-explained transitive property.<sup>14</sup>

Defendants had to shoehorn their justification into a benefit for American farmworkers because the statute requires their certification to be based on prevention of adverse effects for American farmworkers. And that makes their purported explanation even more implausible. It is counterintuitive and irrational to believe that this Final Rule would somehow be a benefit for anyone other than H-2A workers. Quite to the contrary: it seems a more likely result would be to ensure that there are never sufficient qualified and available domestic workers. Why would Americans or permanent residents decide to work in a field where they get less benefits and protections than their foreign competition?

It is clear Defendants are simply using that as a pretext to do what they actually wanted to do—unionize H-2A farmworkers. But the law does not allow them to utilize an implausible pretext to accomplish this.

3. Sharp Departure

Arbitrary and capricious review requires that the agency provide “a reasoned explanation for its action.” FCC v. Fox TV Stations, Inc., 556 U.S. 502, 515 (2009). This is especially true when an agency action is a sharp departure from past practice. See Data Mktg. P’ship, LP v. Dep’t of Labor, 45 F.4th 846, 857 (5th Cir. 2022). Here, Defendants are departing from 37 years of past practice by requiring employers to allow H-2A workers to unionize. Yet Defendants have <sup>14</sup> See, e.g., Fed. Reg. 33,992 (“The tools adopted in this final rule include the right for [H-2A] workers to engage in protected, concerted activity without fear of retaliation and additional worker protections to empower workers in order to engage in advocacy regarding the terms and conditions of employment. In adopting these provisions, the Department is exercising its long-recognized authority to establish the minimum terms and conditions of employment ( i.e., the “baseline” of working conditions) necessary to “neutralize any ‘adverse effect’ [on domestic workers] resultant from the influx of temporary foreign workers.”).

failed even to “display awareness that [they are] changing position,” Fox TV Stations, 556 U.S. at 515, let alone provide a reasonable explanation therefor.

In summary, Defendants provide counterintuitive rationales, in a roundabout way, for how they are preventing adverse effects on American wages. They lack awareness of the limits on their statutory power, the Congressionally mandated relevant considerations, and the significant change that the Final Rule represents. That is not reasonable decision-making. Consequently, the Final Rule is arbitrary and capricious.

II. The Remaining Requirements for Equitable Relief are Met Here

A. Without Relief from this Court, Plaintiff States Will Suffer Irreparable Harm

Due to sovereign immunity, Plaintiff States cannot recover damages from the federal government. SO the unrecoverable costs the Final Rule inflicts on the Plaintiff States constitute irreparable harm. See Georgia v. President of the United States, 46 F.4th 1283, 1302 (11th Cir. 2022) (citation omitted); Florida v. Becerra, 544 F. Supp. 3d 1241, 1300 (M.D. Fla. 2021). Plaintiff States will thus be irreparably harmed by the Final Rule.

Plaintiff States’ workforce agencies will incur administrative costs in the implementation of the Final Rule. The H-2A program requires employers to begin the certification process through state workforce agencies such as those located in Plaintiff States. See, e.g. Goldwater Decl. ¶ 4-5 (attached as Ex. 9) York Decl. ¶¶ 4 – 6 (attached as Ex. 12). And Defendants require state workforce agencies to review job orders for deficiencies and give prospective H-2A employers the ability to correct them. Id. This Final Rule will result in state agencies having to change their approach and behavior, which will result in additional administrative costs. Id. York Decl. ¶¶ 11 – 13. DOL does not provide extra funding to cover these costs, and Plaintiff States cannot otherwise recover these costs from the federal government. The Final Rule requires Plaintiff States to bear the cost of implementation.

B. Without Relief from This Court, Miles Berry Farm and the GFVGA Will Suffer Irreparable Harm

Like the States, Miles Berry Farm and the GFVGA will suffer irreparable harm. First, DOL acknowledges that employers such as Miles Berry Farm and the members of the GFVGA will experience at least two types of costs upon the Final Rule taking effect. One type is an increase in payments to H-2A workers, which stems from changes to the annual effective date of new Adverse Effect Wage Rates (AEWRs). The AEWR is one of the measures used to determine the minimum wage owed to H-2A workers. 89 Fed. Reg. at 34,060. The Final Rule eliminates a delay between the publication of the annual AEWR in the Federal Register and the effective date of the AEWR. See id. (amending 20 C.F.R. § 655.120 to make “updated AEWR... effective as of the date of publication of the notice in the Federal Register”). Absent the Final Rule, changes to the AEWR did not take effect until January 1; with the Final Rule, changes will take effect in mid-December. Id. at 34,048-49. Over a ten-year period, the DOL anticipates this change will cost farms across the country between $12 and $20 million. Id. at 34,049. And, where members of the GFVGA, including Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., employ workers between December 14 and December 31, the change in the effective date of the AEWR will pose a direct financial impact to Plaintiffs. See Butts ¶ 18 (attached as Ex. 3). This direct financial impact will not be recoverable if the Final Rule is permitted to take effect.

The GFVGA identifies the second type of cost, explaining that the Final Rule would increase its costs and costs to its members by requiring compliance in administering a complex new rule that applies to farmworkers for the first time. See Butts Decl. ¶¶ 15-20. The DOL readily acknowledges the existence of these costs, as either a time cost to farmers needing to familiarize themselves with the Final Rule or a financial cost of around $300 to hire a Human Resource specialist to learn about the Final Rule and gather and enter additional information about H-2A employees. See 89 Fed. Reg. at 34,047 (setting HR specialist hourly rate at $55.79 and estimating four hours for rule review<sup>15</sup> and two hours for gathering and entering of new employee information required by the Final Rule); see also id. at 34,044. Again, as with the first cost, this direct financial cost will not be recoverable if the Final Rule is permitted to take effect. This is irreparable per se because legal remedies are inadequate. Janvey v. Alguire, 647 F.3d 585, 600 (5th Cir. 2011).

Miles Berry Farm and GFVGA members outlined a second irreparable injury. The efficient and effective operation of their farms often requires them to investigate personnel matters in a timely manner, especially when disputes impacting the performance of job functions, crop quality, or safety arise between workers in the fields or in a packaging warehouse. Thompson Decl. ¶ 20 (attached as Ex. 6); Brim Decl. ¶ 22 (attached as Ex. 5); Miles Decl. ¶ 20 (attached as Ex. 2); Minor Decl. ¶ 22. Yet, the Final Rule forces these farms to sit on their hands and wait for a designated representative of the H-2A workers to attend before commencing an investigatory interview. 89 Fed. Reg. at 34,063. And this requirement applies where an H-2A worker “reasonably believes” the investigation “might result in disciplinary action,” even if the employer just wants to resolve the matter and get his or her team back to harvesting produce. Id. As a pair of H-2A workers and a crew supervisor sit in an office trying to reach the designated representative, fragile berries are exposed to an extra day on the vine in ninety-degree heat or sit already picked in a warehouse losing their freshness while waiting to be packaged. And the delay means the fruit is also delivered to customers a day late. See generally

<sup>15</sup> This estimate seems low. The Final Rule and accompanying explanatory information is 172 pages, in three-column format. See 89 Fed. Reg. at 33,898-34,069. Thus, to meet the DOL’s four-hour estimate, a farmer or HR specialist seeking to familiarize themselves with the ins and outs of the Final Rule would need to read and internalize the Final Rule’s information at a rate of 43 pages an hour.

BellSouth Telecomms., Inc. v. MCI Metro Access Transmission Servs., LLC, 425 F.3d 964, 970 (11th Cir. 2005) (“Although economic losses alone do not justify a preliminary injunction, the loss of customers and goodwill is an irreparable injury.” (internal quotes omitted)).

Finally, the injury is imminent because it is “certainly impending.” Susan B. Anthony List v. Driehaus, 573 U.S. 149, 158 (2014); accord Swain v. Junior, 961 F.3d 1276, 1292 (11th Cir. 2020). The explanatory preamble to the Final Rule notes that DOL will apply the Final Rule to “all H-2A applications submitted on or after 12:00 a.m. Eastern Daylight Time, August 29, 2024.” 89 Fed. Reg. at 33904. This is but a few months away. The injuries are authorized by policy, making them certain to occur. Worthy v. City of Phenix City, 930 F.2d 1206, 1215 (11th Cir. 2019). And, as demonstrated in the declarations, Miles Berry Farm and at least one member of the GFVGA will be filing H-2A applications between September 2024 and November 2024—i.e., after the Final Rule will apply to their H-2A applications. See Butts Decl. ¶ 18; see also Thompson Decl. ¶ 14 2. Moreover, where farms are highly dependent on H-2A workers, farmers across America will be left with the choice of letting crops go unplanted and unharvested or complying with the Final Rule if the Rule is allowed to take effect. This is an obvious and imminent harm.

C. The Balance of Harms and Public Interest Favor Relief Here.

Plaintiffs meet the remaining factors. “The third and fourth factors ‘merge’ when, as here, the [g]overnment is the opposing party.” Gonzalez v. Governor of Ga., 978 F.3d 1266, 1271 (quotations and citations omitted); accord Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 435 (2009) (same, considering a stay). A preliminary injunction would avoid harm to Plaintiffs. Plaintiffs face imminent and irreversible harms in the form of administrative costs, costs for counselors/advisors, loss of tax revenue, as well as compliance costs for GFVGA and Miles Berry. Yet an injunction will cause “little or no harm” to Defendants. Moore v. Brown, 448 U.S. 1335, 1339 (1980). Having gone 37 years without asserting authority to effect the sea change the Final Rule attempts, Defendants cannot credibly claim need to rush the Final Rule into effect prior to this Court’s preliminary review. As such, the balance of harms favors Plaintiffs.

The public interest also weighs in Plaintiffs’ favor. Agencies are not permitted to act unlawfully “even in pursuit of desirable ends.” Ala. Ass’n of Realtors v. Dep’t of Health & Human Servs., 594 U.S. 758, 766 (2021). “[T]here is ‘no public interest in the perpetuation of unlawful agency action. To the contrary, there is a substantial public interest in having governmental agencies abide by the federal laws that govern their existence and operations.’” Fla. v. Dep’t of Health & Hum. Servs., 19 F.4th 1271, 1315 (11th Cir. 2021) (Lagoa, J., dissenting) (quoting League of Women Voters of U.S. v. Newby, 838 F.3d 1, 12 (D.C. Cir. 2016)). The public is harmed by “the perpetuation of unlawful agency action.” Louisiana v. Biden, 55 F.4th 1017, 1035 (5th Cir. 2022) (quotation omitted).

Beyond the public’s interest in ensuring that the federal government acts legally, the public will be harmed by this Rule because it presents an obstacle to food producers and those costs will be passed along to consumers who are already reeling from the effects of inflation at the grocery store. This factor is also satisfied.

III. The APA and Equity Principles Support Entry of Universal, Preliminary Relief.

This Court should stay or enjoin implementation of the Final Rule nationwide, not just in Plaintiff States, pending a decision on the merits. Under 5 U.S.C. § 705, “[w]hen an agency finds that justice so requires, it may postpone the effective date of action taken by it, pending judicial review”). Section 705 “confer[s] upon every ‘reviewing court’ discretionary authority to stay agency action pending judicial review ‘to the extent necessary to prevent irreparable injury.’” Clark, Att’y Gen’s Manual on the Administrative Procedure Act 105 (1947); see also In re GTE Serv. Corp., 762 F.2d 1024, 1026 (D.C. Cir. 1985) (section 705 provides “statutory authority to stay agency orders pending review”); Mexichem Specialty Resins, Inc. v. EPA, 787 F.3d 544, 562 (D.C. Cir. 2015)

(Kavanaugh, J., dissenting in part) (“Section 705 of the APA authorizes courts to stay agency rules pending judicial review without any time limit on the duration of the stay.”). Courts may—and routinely do—stay effective agency actions, even after the effective date. See, e.g., West Virginia v. EPA, 136 S. Ct. 1000 (2016) (staying EPA’s Clean Power Plan after 29 states moved for a stay under section 705); Wages & White Lion Invs., L.L.C. v. FDA, 16 F.4th 1130 (5th Cir. 2021); Texas v. EPA, 829 F.3d 405 (5th Cir. 2016).

The APA authorizes nationwide relief even as an ultimate remedy. “When a reviewing court determines that agency regulations are unlawful, the ordinary result is that the rules are vacated—not that their application to the individual petitioners is proscribed.” Harmon v. Thornburgh, 878 F.2d 484, 495 n.21 (D.C.Cir.1989); see also Barr v. Am. Ass’n of Political Consultants, Inc., 140 S. Ct. 2335, 2351 (2020) (explaining that when “a provision is declared invalid,” it “cannot be lawfully enforced against others.”). Indeed, the APA itself allows a reviewing court to “hold unlawful and set aside agency action,” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2), a power that is consistent with a nationwide injunction. “[U]nsupported agency action normally warrants vacatur.” Advocs. for Highway & Auto Safety v. Fed. Motor Carrier Safety Admin., 429 F.3d 1136, 1151 (D.C. Cir. 2005). The “ordinary practice” is to “vacate unlawful agency action.” United Steel v. Mine Safety & Health Admin., 925 F.3d 1279, 1287 (D.C. Cir. 2019). Vacatur removes the source of the defendant’s authority. Indeed, “[w]hen a court holds on the merits that a rule is unlawful and should be ‘set aside,’ the rule is vacated, and thereafter cannot be applied to anyone.” Mila Sohoni, The Power to Vacate a Rule, 88 Geo. Wash. L. Rev. 1121, 1131 (2020) (citing Action on Smoking & Health v. Civil Aeronautics Bd., 713 F.2d 795, 797 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (“To ‘vacate,’ as the parties should well know, means ‘to annul; to cancel or rescind; to declare, to make, or to render, void; to defeat; to deprive of force; to make of no authority or validity; to set aside.’”)). “Courts have, thus, found a nationwide injunction appropriate in such cases” Involving federal rules of nationwide scope. Guilford Coll. v. McAleenan, 389 F. Supp. 3d 377, 397 (M.D.N.C. 2019) (collecting cases); accord Jordan v. Pugh, No. CIV.A. 02-CV-01239MS, 2007 WL 2908931, at *4 (D. Colo. Oct. 4, 2007).

The particular facts of this case make it appropriate for a universal injunction. Stays and preliminary injunctions are not “one and the same.” Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 434 (2009). Indeed, they differ in a crucial way: stays act on the proceeding while preliminary injunctions act on the parties. See Nken, 556 U.S. at 428 (“[A]n injunction is a judicial process or mandate operating in personam” (quoting 1 H. Joyce, A Treatise on the Law Relating to Injunctions §1 (1909)); id. at 428 (2009) (an injunction “tells someone what to do or not to do ... [,] directs the conduct of a party, and does so with the backing of [the court’s] full coercive powers”); id. at 428 (2009) (a stay “halt[s] or postpone[s] some portion of the proceeding” or “temporarily divest[s] an order of enforceability” (citing Stay, Black’s Law Dictionary 1413 (6th ed. 1990))). So while both an injunction and a stay can prevent “some action before the legality of that action has been conclusively determined[,]” an injunction “direct[s] an actor’s conduct” but a stay “temporarily suspend[s] the source of authority to act.” Nken, 556 U.S. at 428-29.

This case is appropriate for a universal injunction. First, this rule implicates federal immigration policy, and “courts have frequently found that a nationwide injunction can be warranted in the immigration context.” Florida v. HHS, 19 F.4th 1271, 1282 (11th Cir. 2021). Furthermore, a limited injunction in such circumstances goes against the notion that federal immigration policy is supposed to be “a comprehensive and unified system.” Id. (quoting Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 401 (2012)). And because Plaintiffs include 17 states, an injunction limited to those states would result in inconsistent application of federal immigration law.

Also, independent of context, a universal injunction would “protect similarly situated nonparties [and] avoid the chaos and confusion of a patchwork of injunctions”—considerations that the Eleventh Circuit has found justify universal relief under the APA. Florida v. HHS, 19 F.4th at 1282.

There are other practical reasons for extending the injunction nationwide as well. “[T]ailoring an injunction to address the alleged harms to the remaining States would entail delving into complex issues and contested facts that would make any limits uncertain in their application and effectiveness.” Nebraska v. Biden, 52 F.4th 1044, 1048 (8th Cir. 2022). And allowing union-like rights for H-2A workers in non-Plaintiff states but not in Plaintiff States would create an incentive for such labor in non-Plaintiff States, which would funnel foreign migrant agricultural labor away from Plaintiff States—creating more harm to companies like the GFVGA’s members (the exact opposite of what an injunction is intended to do). This Court should not permit such an inequitable outcome.

Given the magnitude of harms that will occur if the Final Rule is permitted to go into effect in Plaintiff States, it should not be permitted to go into effect in any states while this Court examines the legality of the Final Rule.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should grant Plaintiffs’ Motion for Preliminary Injunction and stay the effective date of the Final Rule. Alternatively, this Court should grant a temporary restraining order until an injunction can be granted.<sup>16</sup>

DECLARATION OF ALLEN MILES

I, Allen Miles, declare the following:

1. The facts set forth in this declaration are based on my knowledge and, if called as a witness, I can competently testify to their truthfulness under oath. As to those matters that reflect a matter of opinion, they reflect my personal opinion and judgment upon the matter.
2. I am a citizen of the United States, a resident of Georgia, over 18 years of age, and have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein.
3. I am fully competent to make this declaration.
4. I am married to Dorothy Miles.
5. We own and operate Miles Berry Farm, which is based in Baxley, Georgia.
6. Miles Berry Farm is not a member of the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association.

7. Our farm was established in 1990. It is a 400-acre organic farm on which we primarily grow blueberries. We also grow strawberries, zucchinis, razzmatazz grapes, cabbage, and other seasonal fruits and vegetables.

8. The crops we grow require significant field work, including hand-picking of fragile berries.

9. We advertise employment opportunities each year in an effort to locate a sufficient number of domestic workers for our farm. We have not been able to locate a sufficient number of domestic workers, despite our best efforts.

10. Miles Berry Farm has been hiring workers through the H-2A program since 2016. From 2016 to 2021, we used a farm labor contractor to recruit and hire H-2A workers. Since 2022, we have employed H-2A workers directly.

11. Presently, Miles Berry Farm employs around 150 H-2A workers each year.

12. We are fully dependent on H-2A workers as our labor force. Without them, our farm would lack the labor necessary to survive.

13. We treat our H-2A workers like family. The fact that many of our H-2A workers return to our farm year after year shows that we treat them well and pay them fairly.

14. We intend to employ a similar number of H-2A workers in 2025, with our next group of workers starting in February of 2025. To make this possible, we will be submitting our next application to participate in the H-2A program for 2025 between October and November of 2024.

15. As part of partaking in the H-2A program, our farm provides housing and transportation for our H-2A workers. The housing we provide is in the city of Baxley, rather than on our farm property. We only permit H-2A workers and their supervisors onto farm property and into the housing we provide.

16. To date, we are unaware of any union organizers approaching our H-2A workers.

17. We do not wish to hire H-2A workers who are protected by provisions mirroring those in the National Labor Relations Act and would not do so without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling us to.

18. We oppose permitting union organizers onto farm property or in the housing units we provide and would not permit them onto our property without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling us to.

19. We oppose permitting union organizers access to our property to meet with our H-2A employees, including in situations where the H-2A employee has invited the union organizer onto our property. We would not permit this access without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling us to.

20. We oppose permitting H-2A employees the ability to have a designee attend any investigatory interview that the employee reasonably believes might result in disciplinary action. This requirement places a considerable burden on our ability to timely and efficiently resolve personnel matters. This is particularly true as to disputes that may arise between employees while working in the fields. Without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling us to do so, we would not delay investigatory actions to permit a designee to attend.

21. Finally, each time a federal agency changes the already layered and complex regulations governing the H-2A program, we are forced to either devote a significant amount of our time and our staff's time to learning the new regulations or hire an outside service provider, specialist, or attorney to interpret, navigate, apply, and assure compliance with the new set of regulations. These compliance costs harm our business.

I declare under penalty of perjury of the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF CHRIS BUTTS

I, Chris Butts, declare the following:

1. The facts set forth in this declaration are based on my knowledge and, if called as a witness, I can competently testify to their truthfulness under oath. As to those matters that reflect a matter of opinion, they reflect my personal opinion and judgment upon the matter.
2. I am a citizen of the United States, a resident of Georgia, over 18 years of age, and have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein.
3. I am fully competent to make this declaration.
4. I am the Executive Vice President of the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association.
5. The Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association, currently based in LaGrange, Georgia, was organized in 1996.
6. The Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association has between 550 and 600 members, which includes around 175 to 200 member organizations.

7. The Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association's mission is to:
  - a. Provide a viable and united voice to represent the fruit and vegetable industry in Georgia;
  - b. Encourage efficient production, packing, handling, storing, and processing of fruits and vegetables;
  - c. Develop marketing and promotional programs to increase public awareness of the health benefits of eating fruits and vegetables and to encourage the consumption of more Georgia products; and
  - d. Support applied research that benefits the industry.

8. In support of its mission, the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association provides its members with educational resources, hosts farm and produce shows, hosts labor relations forums, and engages in legislative activities on behalf of its membership.

9. A key part of the services the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association provides to its members is supplying resources and information on labor relations issues, primarily matters involving the H-2A program. Given the complex nature of the H-2A program, the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association gathers information regarding changes to the H-2A program, assesses how the changes will impact its members' operations, and distributes the information and assessments to its members.

10. The Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association also assists its members in resolving operational challenges in the administration of the H-2A program, such as delays in processing H-2A applications, by serving as a conduit and connector between its members and congressional staff, agency personnel, and farm labor contractors.

11. The Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association hosts a yearly Agricultural Labor Forum, attended by growers, regulators, and farm labor contractors. This forum serves as both an opportunity to educate our members about the complicated regulations governing the H-2A program and allow our members to share and discuss ideas to improve the H-2A program for both workers and employers.

12. Since its inception, the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association has lobbied Congress for reforms to the H-2A program and has provided feedback to the Georgia congressional delegation about various legislative efforts to change the H-2A program. As an example, during the 118th Congressional Session, the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association has engaged with the Georgia congressional delegation regarding the most recent iteration of the Farm Workforce Modernization Act.

13. One of the top concerns expressed by our members involves labor supply and the rising cost of labor. The crops our members grow are fragile and perishable, requiring extensive hand labor rather than the use of automation and mechanization. It is difficult for farms in Georgia to locate a sufficient number of domestic workers to perform the fieldwork and packaging-work needed to plant, harvest, and pack crops.

14. As a result, almost all our member organizations must employ the services of H-2A workers to plant, harvest, and/or package crops.

15. Increased complexity in how the H-2A program operates and the ever changing, voluminous regulations governing the program present administrative and economic costs to our member organizations. This takes the form of the member organizations either needing to spend significant time learning the ins and outs of the new regulations or hiring a specialist, such as an attorney or a human resources manager, to interpret, navigate, and apply the new regulations.

16. Spring Hill Produce, LLC; J.E.T. Farms Georgia, Inc.; Minor Brothers Farm; and

Minor Produce, Inc., are included among our members. Each of these entities either directly hires H-2A workers or has H-2A workers who are employed by a farm labor contractor performing work on their farms.

17. At least one of our member organizations, including J.E.T. Farms Georgia, Inc., will be filing an application between September and October of this year to participate in the H-2A program.

18. At least one of our member organizations, including Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., will have H-2A visa holders working on their farm between December 14, 2024, and January 1, 2025. As a result, members of the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association who rely on the Adverse Effect Wage Rate to determine wages will have to pay H-2A workers more money based on the Final Rule's change to the effective date of the Adverse Effect Wage Rate.

19. Workers holding H-2A visas are not currently permitted to unionize and are not granted protections like those provided by the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA). If the Final H-2A Rule is permitted to go into effect, it will harm members of the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association by

- a. forcing them to hire workers receiving protections that mirror those provided by the NLRA;
- b. forcing them to permit union organizers onto their property by allowing H-2A workers to (i) invite guests onto the property and (ii) have a representative attend any investigatory interview that the worker reasonably believes might result in disciplinary action;

- c. impeding their ability to efficiently and effectively resolve workplace disputes and disturbances by delaying investigatory and disciplinary proceedings to permit H-2A workers the ability to have a representative attend such proceedings;
- d. forcing them to incur time or financial costs to understand and comply with the Final Rule; and
- e. requiring those members who employ workers between December 14 and December 31 each year and rely on the Adverse Effect Wage Rate to calculate wages to incur financial expenses because of the new and earlier effective date of the annual Adverse Effect Wage Rate.

20. Accordingly, the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association has brought this suit to protect the rights of its members and ensure that its membership can operate its farms in a successful manner and provide food for American families.

I declare under penalty of perjury of the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF DICK MINOR

I, Dick Minor, declare the following:

1. The facts set forth in this declaration are based on my knowledge and, if called as a witness, I can competently testify to their truthfulness under oath. As to those matters that reflect a matter of opinion, they reflect my personal opinion and judgment upon the matter.
2. I am a citizen of the United States, a resident of Georgia, over 18 years of age, and have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein.
3. I am fully competent to make this declaration.
4. I am the owner and operator of Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., which are based in Andersonville, Georgia. Minor Brothers Farm is my farming operation and Minor Produce, Inc., is my packaging operation.
5. Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., are both members of the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association.

6. Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., rely upon the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association to provide resources, information, and connections to assist them in navigating the H-2A program, including the voluminous regulations governing the program.

7. My farm has been in operation since 1983. Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., have led the operation of the farm, in its current structure, since 2009. My farm is 1200 acres. I grow a spring and a fall crop. My crops include green beans, cucumbers, squashes, cabbage, broccoli, and watermelons. We package our own produce.

8. The crops I grow require significant field work, including the hand harvesting of crops. The packaging operation depends upon manual labor, including the hand grading and boxing of fruits and vegetables for shipment.

9. For over the last yen years, Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., have relied upon a farm labor contractor to supply H-2A workers.

10. Presently, a total of 150 to 200 H-2A workers a year perform work for Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc.

11. Without the use of H-2A workers, Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., would lack the labor necessary to harvest and package our crops.

12. Our H-2A workers are an integral part of our farming and packaging operation. We ensure that our workers are treated fairly and that their needs are met. To facilitate this, we are careful in the selection of our crew leaders who are directly reasonable for overseeing the day-to-day work in the fields and in the packaging center.

13. Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., intend to continue to work with their farm labor contractor to ensure the supply of a similar number of H-2A workers in 2025.

14. In September 2024, I plan to have a group of H-2A workers begin work for Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc. To make this possible, in July 2024, our farm labor contractor will submit an application to participate in the H-2A program.

15. These workers will work on my farm until December 20th of this year.

16. In April 2025, I plan to have a group of H-2A workers begin work for Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc. To make this possible, in February 2025, our farm labor contractor will submit an application to participate in the H-2A program.

17. As part of partaking in the H-2A program, Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., provides housing and transportation for our H-2A workers. The housing we provide is on our farm in Andersonville.

18. To date, I am unaware of any union organizers approaching H-2A workers while on the property of Minor Brothers Farm or Minor Produce, Inc.

19. I do not wish to have H-2A workers who are protected by provisions mirroring those in the National Labor Relations Act working at Minor Brothers Farm or at Minor Produce, Inc., and would not do so without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to.

20. I oppose permitting union organizers onto Minor Brothers Farm or Minor Produce, Inc., property, including the housing areas provided to H-2A workers, and would not permit them onto our properties without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to.

21. I oppose permitting union organizers access to the property of Minor Brothers Farm and Minor Produce, Inc., to meet with our H-2A employees, including in situations where the H-2A employee has invited the union organizer onto our property. I would not permit this access without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to.

22. Finally, I oppose permitting H-2A visa holders the opportunity to have a designee attend any investigatory interview that the visa holder reasonably believes might result in disciplinary action. This requirement places a considerable burden on my team's ability to timely and efficiently resolve workplace matters. This is particularly true as to disputes that may arise between H-2A visa holders while working in the fields or in the packaging center. Without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to do so, I would not delay investigatory actions to permit a designee to attend.

I declare under penalty of perjury of the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF BILL BRIM

I, Bill Brim, declare the following:

1. The facts set forth in this declaration are based on my knowledge and, if called as a witness, I can competently testify to their truthfulness under oath. As to those matters that reflect a matter of opinion, they reflect my personal opinion and judgment upon the matter.
2. I am a citizen of the United States, a resident of Georgia, over 18 years of age, and have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein.
3. I am fully competent to make this declaration.
4. I own and operate Spring Hill Produce, LLC which is based in Tifton, Georgia.
5. Spring Hill Produce, LLC is a member of the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association. Spring Hill Produce, LLC is also a division of Lewis Taylor Farms.
6. Spring Hill Produce, LLC relies upon the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association to provide resources, information, and connections to assist us in navigating the H-2A program, including the voluminous regulations governing the program.

7. Lewis Taylor Farms started operations in the 1950s. In 1985, I assumed partial ownership of Lewis Taylor Farms. Presently, my farming operation is 3700 acres, on which we grow a spring crop and a fall crop. I primarily grow peppers, cucumbers, squashes, eggplants, strawberries, and some row crops. Spring Hill Produce, LLC has both a greenhouse operation, in which we grow vegetable starters and tree seedlings, and a packaging operation.

8. The crops we grow require significant field work, including planting and harvesting crops, weeding our fields, packing and loading our produce, loading transplants and seedings, and driving farm equipment and trucks.

9. We advertise employment opportunities each year in an effort to locate a sufficient number of domestic workers for our farm. I have not been able to locate a sufficient number of domestic workers, despite my best efforts.

10. Spring Hill Produce, LLC has been hiring workers through the H-2A program since its inception in 2007. Between 1998 and 2007, another entity associated with Lewis Taylor Farms participated in the H-2A program.

11. Presently, Spring Hill Produce, LLC employs approximately 450 H-2A workers each year.

12. Without participating in the H-2A program, our farm would lack the labor necessary to plant, tend, and harvest our crops.

13. Our workers are an integral part of our farm. Most of our workers have been with us for many years and become not just employees but friends and community members while with us. We cannot farm without them, and we try and maintain the best environment for them, both with respect to the homes they live in and their daily working conditions. The labor our H-2A workers provide is not easy, but we know the opportunities to come here are life changing for most of them because the opportunities give them a chance to provide more for their families than they could make in their home countries.

14. In July 2023, Spring Hill Produce, LLC applied to participate in the H-2A program for workers for our 2024 crops.

15. Spring Hill Produce, LLC intends to employ a similar number of H-2A workers in 2025. In July 2024, Spring Hill Produce, LLC will submit its application for workers for our 2025 crops.

16. Spring Hill Produce, LLC's first application that will be processed in accordance with the Final Rule will be in July 2025.

17. As part of partaking in the H-2A program, our farm provides housing for our H-2A workers. The housing we provide is on our farm in Tifton. Pursuant to farm policy, we do not permit anyone not living in the housing units or working on the farm to be on the property.

18. To date, I am unaware of any union organizers approaching our H-2A workers.

19. I do not wish to hire H-2A workers who are protected by provisions mirroring those in the National Labor Relations Act and would not do so without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to.

20. I oppose permitting union organizers onto farm property or in the housing Spring Hill Produce, LLC provides and would not permit them onto our property without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to.

21. I oppose permitting union organizers access to our property to meet with our H-2A employees, including in situations where the H-2A employee has invited the union organizer onto our property. I would not permit this access without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to.

22. I oppose permitting H-2A employees the opportunity to have a designee attend any investigatory interview that the employee reasonably believes might result in disciplinary action. This requirement places a considerable burden on our ability to timely and efficiently resolve workplace matters. This is particularly true as to disputes that may arise between employees while working in the fields, in the greenhouses, or in the packaging area. Without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to do so, I would not delay investigatory actions to permit a designee to attend.

23. Finally, each time a federal agency changes the already layered and complex regulations governing the H-2A program, I am forced to either devote a significant amount of my time and my staff's time to learning the new regulations or hire an outside service provider, specialist, or attorney to interpret, navigate, apply, and assure compliance with the new set of regulations.

I declare under penalty of perjury of the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF JOSEPH E. THOMPSON, Jr.

I, Joseph E. Thompson, Jr., declare the following:

1. The facts set forth in this declaration are based on my knowledge and, if called as a witness, I can competently testify to their truthfulness under oath. As to those matters that reflect a matter of opinion, they reflect my personal opinion and judgment upon the matter.
2. I am a citizen of the United States, a resident of Georgia, over 18 years of age, and have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein.
3. I am fully competent to make this declaration.
4. I own and operate J.E.T. Farms Georgia, Inc., which is based in Camilla, Georgia.
5. J.E.T. Farms Georgia, Inc., is a member of the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association.
6. J.E.T. Farms Georgia, Inc., relies upon the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association to provide resources, information, and connections to assist us in navigating the H-2A program, including the voluminous regulations governing the program.

7. My family has farmed for three generations. I primarily grow sweet corn, green beans, and blueberries.

8. The crops I grow require significant field work, including operating equipment, planting crops, and hand-picking fruits and vegetables.

9. I advertise employment opportunities each year in an effort to locate a sufficient number of domestic workers for our farm. I have not been able to locate a sufficient number of domestic workers, despite my best efforts.

10. J.E.T. Farms Georgia, Inc., has been directly hiring workers through the H-2A program since 2022.

11. Presently, J.E.T. Farms Georgia, Inc., directly employs four H-2A workers. Additional H-2A workers employed by a farm labor contractor perform work on our farm.

12. Without the use of H-2A workers, J.E.T Farms Georgia, Inc., would lack the labor necessary to plant and harvest our crops.

13. My workers are an integral part of our farm, and I ensure their fair treatment.

14. Starting in October or November 2024, I intend to indirectly employ, through a farm labor contractor, approximately fifty H-2A workers. I also intend to directly employ approximately four H-2A workers in 2025, with my next group of directly employed workers starting in February of 2025 and working through November 2025. To make this all possible, between August 2024 and January 2025, my farm labor contractor and I will be submitting applications to participate in the H-2A program.

15. As part of partaking in the H-2A program, J.E.T. Georgia, Inc., provides housing and transportation for our H-2A workers. Some of the housing is on my farm in Camilla. Pursuant to farm policy, H-2A workers must obtain management permission to have guests on the property or in the housing units.

16. To date, I am unaware of any union organizers approaching our H-2A workers.

17. I do not wish to hire H-2A workers who are protected by provisions mirroring those in the National Labor Relations Act and would not do so without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to.

18. I oppose permitting union organizers onto farm property or in the housing J.E.T. Farms Georgia, Inc., provides and would not permit them onto my property without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to.

19. I oppose permitting union organizers access to my property to meet with my H-2A employees, including in situations where the H-2A employee has invited the union organizer onto my property. I would not permit this access without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to.

20. I oppose permitting H-2A employees the ability to have a designee attend any investigatory interview that the employee reasonably believes might result in disciplinary action. This requirement places a considerable burden on our ability to timely and efficiently resolve workplace matters. This is particularly true as to disputes that may arise between employees while working in the fields or as to urgent corrections needed to address safety or crop quality issues. Without the Final Rule taking effect and compelling me to do so, I would not delay investigatory actions to permit a designee to attend.

21. Finally, each time a federal agency changes the already layered and complex regulations governing the H-2A program, I am forced to either devote a significant amount of my time and my staff's time to learning the new regulations or hire an outside service provider, specialist, or attorney to interpret, navigate, apply, and assure compliance with the new set of regulations. These compliance costs harm my business.

I declare under penalty of perjury of the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF DARYL E. BASSETT

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I, Daryl E. Bassett, hereby declare under penalty of perjury that this declaration is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief:

1. My name is Daryl E. Bassett, and my business address is 900 West Capitol Avenue, Suite 400, Little Rock, Arkansas 72201. I am over the age of eighteen, have personal knowledge of the subject matter, and am competent to testify concerning the matters in this declaration.
2. I am the Secretary of the Department of Labor and Licensing (ADLL) for the State of Arkansas. My job responsibilities include overseeing the functions and duties of our Department's Division of Labor to provide training and education and to facilitate the mediation of labor disputes and formal grievances pursuant to Arkansas Code § 11-2-109 and § 11-2-201 et seq. The Department and its mediator are required to maintain a reputation for impartiality and integrity towards labor, management, and other interested parties participating in mediation efforts.
3. I am submitting this declaration concerning Plaintiffs' Complaint for Declaratory and Injunctive relief as to a Final Rule, published by the United States Department of Labor

(DOL) on April 29, 2024, entitled “Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States,” (89 Fed. Reg. 33,898) (effective June 28, 2024) (Final Rule). The Final Rule is DOL’s final action after DOL published a September 2023 proposal to create collective bargaining rights for certain foreign migrant agricultural workers and reviewed comments from stakeholders.

4. If agricultural workers unionized in Arkansas their union and the company that employs them would be treated like all other unions in our state. The additional costs to ADLL would result from increased travel expenses (mileage, hotel, and meals) and the expense of the ADLL mediator’s salary. ADLL’s mediator covers the entire state and usually travels to a location one (1) day before mediation services are performed since a negotiation or other service typically begin at 8:30 a.m. The ADLL mediator works with unions and companies with union employees in three areas:

- A. Collective Bargaining

Collective bargaining negotiations are generally conducted between a union and employer every three (3) years at the end of a collective bargaining agreement (CBA). When the CBA expires union and management bargaining team members meet to discuss any changes they would like to make to the CBA. When an impasse is reached concerning one (1) or more issues, the ADLL mediator meets with both sides together and individually to help them reach an agreement. The sides normally meet 2-4 days together every couple of weeks until an agreement is reached. The ADLL mediator may meet with them anywhere between a few days to thirty (30) or more days over a period of several months before an agreement is reached. On average, if asked to help when only a few issues remain the ADLL mediator will meet with the parties between six (6) and ten (10) days. However, the ADLL mediator may be asked to meet every time the parties meet and has met with groups for as many as thirty (30) or forty-five (45) days over a six-month period. Additional time is also spent outside of scheduled meetings with emails and phone calls to both sides.

B. Grievance Mediation

Every CBA contains an agreed upon process to handle issues that arise between management and employees. Grievances may arise from disciplinary actions, missed work opportunities, contract wording, or other employment-related matters. The ADLL mediator is asked to mediate the dispute before a grievance goes to arbitration; hears the grievance; and tries to help both sides reach a resolution if possible or gives an opinion concerning the potential outcome if the grievance is determined by a formal arbitration proceeding. Typically, 1-3 grievances can be heard per day. Grievances involving termination typically last one-half day. Depending on the number of grievances, 1-3 days are usually spent with the union and company.

C. Education/Training

A variety of standardized trainings conducted by the ADLL mediator are available which cover subjects such as basic contract negotiations, stewardship training (stewards are the local union leaders), management training (supervisors and human resources personnel), contract basics (e.g., Weingarten Rights, just cause, difference between a gripe and grievance, etc.), and communication skills. Trainings last a minimum of one day and are typically two days. Preliminary preparation can last hours or sometimes days to review relevant information and analyze the current CBA to effectively conduct the training and answer any questions that may arise during the training.

5. The additional expense to fulfill ADLL's duties upon implementation of the Final Rule do not include any cost or expense to other state or local branches of Arkansas government. State resources will be required to implement the new Final Rule. The Final Rule compels Arkansas to commit these state resources toward its implementation without any additional funding from DOL to account for the increase in workload or expenses.

DECLARATION OF CARRIE ROTH

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I, Carrie Roth, hereby declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, based on my personal knowledge and information:

1. My name is Carrie Roth, and my business address is 6606 W Broad Street, Richmond, Virginia 23230. I am over the age of eighteen, have personal knowledge of the subject matter, and am competent to testify concerning the matters in this declaration.
2. I have served as the Director of the Virginia Department of Workforce Development and Advancement (Virginia Works) since October 1, 2023, and served previously as Commissioner of the Virginia Employment Commission from January 16, 2022, until September 30, 2023. I have a bachelor's degree from Virginia Commonwealth University. My responsibilities as the agency head include overseeing the Foreign Labor Certification program, which includes employer requests for foreign labor (Job Orders) that are submitted to the United States Department of Labor (DOL) for certification.

Purpose of Declaration

3. I am submitting this declaration in support of Plaintiffs' Complaint for Declaratory and Injunctive relief as to a Final Rule, published by DOL on April 29, 2024, titled "Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States," (89 Fed. Reg. 33,898) (effective June 28, 2024) (Final Rule). The Final Rule is DOL's final action after the agency published a September 2023 proposal to purportedly create collective bargaining rights for certain foreign migrant agricultural workers and reviewed comments from stakeholders.

State Regulation (H2-A Program)

4. Pursuant to the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA), employers who want to employ foreign workers must apply to DOL for certification before the foreign workers can receive H-2A employment visas. Applicants must first submit a Job Order to the applicable State Workforce Agency for approval prior to submission of an H-2A Application to DOL for certification.
5. Virginia Works is Virginia's State Workforce Agency for purposes of reviewing Job Orders. It is Virginia Works' responsibility to receive and review Job Orders to ensure they are free of deficiencies prior to the filing of H-2A applications with DOL.
6. An experienced and qualified Virginia Works staff member must review every Job Order associated with a request for H-2A visas to determine compliance with federal and state regulations.
7. There were 348 Virginia agribusinesses that requested 4,877 H-2A workers, associated with 225 unique Job Orders in program year 2023.

Impact on Virginia (H-2A Program)

8. The Commonwealth of Virginia and regulated entities will be required to dedicate many more hours and direct out-of-pocket costs to review H-2A employers for federal compliance as a result of the additional duties and requirements contained in the Final Rule.
9. Farmland accounts for approximately 30% of land usage in Virginia, and agribusiness generates $82.3 billion in annual economic impact. In the last six program years the number of employers requesting H-2A visas has grown by 27% with a 108% increase in Job Orders. The number of clearance orders is anticipated to grow further due to the aging-out of current domestic agricultural employees and a shortage of domestic workers to fill the vacancies.
10. The Final Rule compels Virginia to commit significant staff resources toward its implementation without any additional funding from DOL to account for the increase in workload.
11. The Final Rule would impose an immediate and increased monitoring burden on Virginia Works, which will need to scrutinize every application for H-2A visas against a likely increasing list of debarred employers, and to begin a lengthy process to sever all services to those employers. This process is time consuming and resource intensive. It requires Virginia Works staff to review and approve draft Job Orders, review hundreds of worksite addresses within the Job Orders and cross reference them with any debarred employers, agents, and successors in interest. This process puts a significant burden on Virginia Works' staff and its limited resources, impeding the agency's ability to perform its many other duties in service of Virginia.

12. Due to this significant increase in workload, an additional staff member working at 40 hours per week would be needed to facilitate complaints of violations of the Final Rule and to assist with discontinuation of services proceedings.

13. This the 13th day of June 2024.

DECLARATION OF DIANA GOLDWIRE

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I, Diana Goldwire, hereby declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, based on my personal knowledge and information:

1. My name is Diana Goldwire, and my business address is 1550 Gadsden Street, Columbia, SC 29202. I am over the age of eighteen, have personal knowledge of the subject matter, and am competent to testify concerning the matters in this declaration.
2. I have served as the Assistant Executive Director of the Employment Services Division at DEW since January 2015. I have a Bachelors and Masters degrees from LaGrange College and the following certifications: Professional for Human Resources (PHR), SHRM-CP, and Global Career Facilitator. My job responsibilities include overseeing DEW's review of employer requests for foreign labor (Job Orders) prior to submission of foreign labor applications to DOL for certification.

Purpose of Declaration

3. I am submitting this declaration in support of Plaintiffs' Complaint for Declaratory and Injunctive relief as to a Final Rule, published by the United States Department of Labor (DOL) on April 29, 2024, titled "Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States," (89 Fed. Reg. 33,898) (effective June 28, 2024) (Final Rule). The Final Rule is DOL's final action after DOL published a September 2023 proposal to purportedly create collective bargaining rights for certain foreign migrant agricultural workers and reviewed comments from stakeholders.

State Regulation (H2-A Program)

4. Pursuant to the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA), employers who wish to employ foreign workers must apply to DOL for certification before the foreign workers can receive H-2A employment visas. Applicants must first submit a Job Order to the applicable State Workforce Agency for approval prior to submission of an H-2A Application to DOL for certification.
5. DEW is South Carolina's State Workforce Agency for purposes of reviewing Job Orders. It is DEW's responsibility to receive and review Job Orders to ensure they are free of deficiencies prior to the filing of H-2A applications with DOL.
6. An experienced and qualified DEW staff member must review every job order associated with a request for H-2A visas for compliance with federal and state regulations.
7. There were 143 South Carolina agribusinesses that applied for 8,096 H-2A visas, associated with 231 unique job orders in program year 2023.

Impact on South Carolina (H-2A Program)

8. The additional duties and requirements promulgated under the Final Rule will require South Carolina and regulated entities within South Carolina to dedicate many more compensated hours and direct out-of-pocket costs to review H-2A employers for federal compliance. The new rule does not provide additional resources or funding to conduct the investigations.
9. Farmland accounts for approximately 40% of land usage in South Carolina, and agribusiness generates $51.8 billion in annual economic impact. In the last nine program years the number of employers requesting H-2A visas has grown by nearly 250% with a 305% increase in job orders and a 112% increase in the number of requested visas. With the aging-out of current domestic agricultural employees and a shortage of domestic workers to fill the vacancies, the number of clearance orders is anticipated to continue to grow.
10. State resources will be required to implement the new Final Rule. The Final Rule compels South Carolina to commit these state resources toward its implementation without any additional funding from DOL to account for the increase in workload.
11. The Final Rule would require DEW to update its standard operating procedures and policies relating to review of job orders. For example, the Final Rule would require DEW to consider H-2A employers' compliance with the collective bargaining aspects of the Final Rule before approving job orders. DEW personnel would also need to be trained on such changes required by the Final Rule.
12. The Final Rule would impose an immediate and increased monitoring burden on DEW, which is required to begin scrutinizing every application for H-2A visas against an inadequate list of debarred employers, and to begin a lengthy process to sever all ES services to those employers. This process is time consuming and resource intensive. It requires DEW staff to review and approve draft Job Orders, comb through hundreds of worksite addresses within the job orders and cross reference them with debarred employers, agents, and successors in interest. This process puts a significant burden on DEW's staff and its limited resources, impeding DEW's ability to perform its many other duties in service of South Carolina.

13. The final rule requires that if an employer fails to comply with reporting the delay in start dates, the agency must now file the apparent violation and may refer the apparent violation to the Department's WHD which increases the DEW staff workload for this program.
14. Due to this significant increase in workload, an additional staff member working at 37.5 hours per week would be required to comply with the Final Rule.
15. The Final Rule proposes changes to § 658.501(a)(4), regarding South Carolina employers who accidentally misclassify the H-2A and/or H2-B job positions. This section implies this may be common. The proposed change is unsupportive of the employers who are in good faith employing workers in this state and may have been participating in the incorrect visa program. The process is not discussed for employers who have historically misclassified their positions and now learn of this change after already participating in a visa program. With these visa programs being time sensitive, deadlines would be missed, and emergency orders would increase resulting in additional burdens on DEW staff.

16. This the 12 day of June 2024.

DECLARATION OF PHILLIP N. DAVIS

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I hereby declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge:

1. My name is Phillip N. Davis , and my business address is 1000 East Divide Ave, PO Box 5507, Bismarck, ND. I am over the age of eighteen and am competent to testify concerning the matters in this declaration. The statements made herein are made from my own personal knowledge or information available to me in the performance of my professional duties.
2. I have served as the Workforce Services Director for the past five years. In this role I oversee the nine Workforce Centers across the state of North Dakota who conduct the housing inspections of the Ag Producers who utilize the H2A Foreign Labor Certification Program. Additionally, I am responsible for a unit called Workforce Programs who administers the H2A program for ND.
3. I am submitting this declaration in support of Plaintiffs' lawsuit challenging the Final Rule published by the United States Department of Labor (DOL) on April 29, 2024, entitled “Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States” (89 Fed. Reg. 33,898) (Final Rule). The Final Rule is effective June 28, 2024.

State Regulation of the H2-A Program and Impact of the Final Rule on North Dakota

4. Pursuant to the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA), employers who wish to employ foreign workers must apply to DOL for certification before the foreign workers can receive H-2A employment visas. But before Applicants may apply to DOL they must first submit a Job Order to the applicable State Workforce Agency for approval.
5. In North Dakota, Job Service of North Dakota (“JSND”) is the State Workforce Agency whose responsibility it is to review job orders, conduct housing inspections, and ensure the job orders are free of deficiencies prior to the filing of H-2A applications with DOL.
6. A qualified staff member of JSND must review every job order associated with a request for H-2A visas for compliance with federal and state regulations. JSND has 7 calendar days to review job orders and housing inspections must typically be completed in 30-45 days (notwithstanding emergency filings). Once a job order is reviewed by JSND, the agency either issues a state acceptance and the job order is posted on our state workforce system or notices of deficiencies are issued until they are corrected.
7. In program year 2023, there were 1,115 agri-businesses that applied for 3,646 H-2A visas, associated with 1,086 unique job orders.
8. Implementing the Final Rule will require the expenditure of North Dakota State resources without any additional funding from DOL to account for the increase in workload.
9. First, the Final Rule will require JSND to update its standard operating procedures and policies relating to review of job orders. Second, the Final Rule will require JSND staff expend time entering the hourly wage rate into the clearance order, and any non-hourly wage rate offered. Third, the Final Rule will require JSND to consider H-2A employers' compliance with the collective bargaining aspects of the Final Rule before approving job orders. And fourth, JSND personnel would need to be trained on the changes required by the Final Rule, taking limited staff time that could be used in other capacities.

10. Due to this increase in workload and increased need for training, JSND estimates that approximately two to three hours of staff time per week will be required to comply with the Final Rule during the next 12 months.

Executed in Bismarck, North Dakota, on June, 12th, 2024.

DECLARATION OF ISABELLE POTTS

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I, Isabelle Potts, hereby declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, based on my personal knowledge and information:

1. My name is Isabelle Potts, and my business address is 107 East Madison Street, Tallahassee, FL, 32399. I am over the age of eighteen, have personal knowledge of the subject matter, and am competent to testify concerning the matters in this declaration.
2. I have served as the Workforce Administrator of Statewide Initiatives at the Florida Department of Commerce (“FloridaCommerce”) since March 2022. I have a Bachelors and Law degrees from the University of Texas at Austin. My job responsibilities include overseeing FloridaCommerce’s review of employer requests for foreign labor (Job Orders) prior to submission of foreign labor applications to the United.States Department of Labor (DOL) for certification.

Purpose of Declaration

3. I am submitting this declaration in support of Plaintiffs' Complaint for Declaratory and Injunctive relief as to a Final Rule, published by DOL on April 29, 2024, titled "Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States," (89 Fed. Reg. 33,898) (effective June 28, 2024) (Final Rule). The Final Rule is DOL's final action after DOL published a September 2023 proposal to purportedly create collective bargaining rights for certain foreign migrant agricultural workers and reviewed comments from stakeholders.

State Regulation (H2-A Program)

4. Pursuant to the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA), employers who wish to employ foreign workers must apply to DOL for certification before the foreign workers can receive H-2A employment visas. Applicants must first submit a Job Order to the applicable State Workforce Agency for approval prior to submission of an H-2A Application to DOL for certification.
5. FloridaCommerce is Florida's State Workforce Agency for purposes of reviewing Job Orders. It is FloridaCommerce's responsibility to receive and review Job Orders to ensure they are free of deficiencies prior to the filing of H-2A applications with DOL.
6. An experienced and qualified FloridaCommerce staff member must review every Job Order associated with a request for H-2A visas for compliance with federal and state regulations.
7. According to FloridaCommerce's data collection system, there were 385 Florida agribusinesses that submitted Job Orders to FloridaCommerce for 51,538 position openings, associated with 938 unique Job Orders in program year 2022-2023.

Impact on Florida (H-2A Program)

8. The additional duties and requirements promulgated under the Final Rule will require Florida and regulated entities within Florida to dedicate many more compensated hours and direct out-of-pocket costs to review H-2A employers for federal compliance. The new rule does not provide additional resources or funding to conduct the investigations.
9. According to the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, the agricultural industry in Florida employes approximately 2.5 million people and contributes more than $180 billion to the state's economy. In the last nine program years the number of employers placing Job Orders to related requests for H-2A visas has grown by 198% with a 360% increase in Job Orders and a 196% increase in the number of position openings. With the aging-out of current domestic agricultural employees and a shortage of domestic workers to fill the vacancies, the number of clearance orders is anticipated to continue to grow.
10. State resources will be required to implement the new Final Rule. The Final Rule compels Florida to commit these state resources toward its implementation without any additional funding from DOL to account for the increase in workload.
11. The Final Rule would require FloridaCommerce to update its standard operating procedures and policies relating to review of job orders. FloridaCommerce personnel would also need to be trained on such changes required by the Final Rule.
12. The Final Rule would impose an immediate and increased monitoring burden on FloridaCommerce, which is required to begin scrutinizing every application for H-2A visas against an inadequate list of debarred employers, and to begin a lengthy process to sever all ES services to those employers. This process is time consuming and resource intensive.

It requires FloridaCommerce staff to review and approve draft Job Orders, comb through hundreds of worksite addresses within the job orders and cross reference them with debarred employers, agents, and successors in interest. This process puts a significant burden on FloridaCommerce's staff and its limited resources, impeding FloridaCommerce's ability to perform its many other duties in service of Florida.

13. The final rule requires the initiation of procedures for discontinuation of services for any employer, agent, attorney, including a successor in interest of such employer, agent, or attorney that is listed on the debarred list, which increases the FloridaCommerce staff workload. Additionally, with these visa programs being time sensitive, deadlines will likely be missed, and the issuance of emergency orders, when required, would impose additional burdens on FloridaCommerce staff.
14. Due to this significant increase in workload, it is estimated that two additional staff members working at 40 hours per week would be required to comply with the Final Rule.
15. This the 11th day of June 2024.

DECLARATION OF MARY YORK

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I, Mary York, hereby declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, based on my personal knowledge and information:

1. My name is Mary York, and my business address is 105 E. 15th Street, Austin, Texas 78701. I am over the age of eighteen, of sound mind, and otherwise competent to make this declaration. The facts set out in this Declaration are based on my personal knowledge and experience. I could testify as to the contents of this declaration if called upon to do so.
2. I have served as the Director of the Workforce Development Division for the Texas Workforce Commission (TWC) since June 3, 2024. I have a Bachelor of Science in Agricultural Economics from Texas A&M University and previously held roles directing the work of TWC's Outreach and Employer Initiatives Division, serving as Deputy Director for the Texas Economic Development & Tourism Office, and leading the Marketing and International Trade Division at the Texas Department of Agriculture. My current job responsibilities include overseeing TWC's Foreign Labor Certification program, which receives, reviews and processes employer requests for foreign labor (job orders) prior to submission of foreign labor applications to the United States Department of Labor (DOL) for certification.

Purpose of Declaration

3. I am submitting this declaration in support of Plaintiffs' Complaint for Declaratory and Injunctive relief as to a Final Rule, published by the DOL on April 29, 2024, titled "Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States," (89 Fed. Reg. 33,898) (effective June 28, 2024) (Final Rule). The Final Rule is DOL's final action after DOL published a September 2023 proposal to purportedly create collective bargaining rights for certain foreign migrant agricultural workers and reviewed comments from stakeholders.

State Regulation (H-2A Program)

4. Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA), employers who wish to employ foreign workers must apply to DOL for certification before the foreign workers can receive H-2A employment visas. Applicants must first submit a job order to the applicable State Workforce Agency for approval prior to submission of an H-2A Application to DOL for certification.
5. TWC is the designated State Workforce Agency responsible for reviewing job orders in Texas. TWC is tasked with receiving and reviewing job orders to ensure they meet all federal requirements before the H-2A applications are filed with the DOL.
6. An experienced and qualified TWC staff member must review every job order associated with a request for H-2A visas for compliance with federal and state regulations.
7. In program year 2023, 969 Texas agribusinesses applied for 12,252 H-2A visas, associated with 1,233 unique job orders.

Impact on Texas (H-2A Program)

8. The additional duties and requirements introduced by the Final Rule will necessitate a significant increase in compensated staff hours and direct out-of-pocket costs for Texas and regulated entities within the state to ensure H-2A employers comply with federal regulations. Notably, the new rule does not provide additional resources or funding to support these increased investigative efforts.
9. Agricultural land in Texas accounts for approximately 125.4 million acres and based on the most recent U.S. Census of Agriculture, the market value of agricultural production in Texas is estimated at $32.1 billion in cash receipts (USDA - National Agricultural Statistics Service - 2022 Census of Agriculture - Volume 1, Chapter 1: State Level Data). In the last nine program years, the number of employers requesting H-2A visas has grown by nearly 230% with a 260% increase in job orders and a 390% increase in the number of requested visas. With the aging-out of current domestic agricultural employees and a shortage of domestic workers to fill these vacancies, the number of clearance orders is anticipated to continue to grow.
10. State resources will be required to implement the new Final Rule. The Final Rule compels Texas to commit these state resources toward its implementation without any additional funding from DOL to account for the increase in workload.
11. The Final Rule will necessitate updates to TWC's standard operating procedures and policies regarding the review of job orders. For example, TWC will need to evaluate H-2A employers' compliance with the collective bargaining aspects of the Final Rule before approving job orders. Additionally, TWC personnel will require training to adapt to the changes mandated by the Final Rule.

12. The Final Rule would impose an immediate and increased monitoring burden on TWC. TWC will need to scrutinize every H-2A visa application against a list of debarred employers and initiate a lengthy process to terminate all Employment Services (ES) services to those employers. This time-consuming and resource-intensive process involves reviewing and approving job orders, examining multiple worksite addresses within the job orders, and cross-referencing them with debarred employers, agents, and successors in interest. This imposes a significant strain on TWC's staff and limited program resources, impeding TWC's ability to fulfill its other responsibilities in service to Texas. The Final Rule also requires TWC to ensure employers applying for H-2A visa applications have not had ES services discontinued in another state.
13. The Final Rule would impose an immediate and increased monitoring burden on TWC regarding the requirements under 20 CFR §658.501 Basis for Discontinuation of Services. The final rule requires TWC to direct staff resources to monitoring employer compliance with the terms and conditions of each individual job order, increase the number and frequency of required field checks and initiate procedures for discontinuation of services to employers who violate the provisions of §658.501.
14. This the 12 day of June 2024.

I submit this declaration in support of Plaintiffs' Complaint for Declaratory and Injunctive relief as to a Rule, published by the United States Department of Labor (DOL) on April 29, 2024, titled "Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States," (89 Fed. Reg. 33,898) (effective June 28, 2024) (Rule).

4. Pursuant to the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA), employers who wish to employ foreign workers must first submit a Job Order to the applicable State Workforce Agency for approval prior to submission of an H-2A Application to DOL for certification.
5. AWC is the State Workforce Agency for the State of Arkansas. It is AWC's responsibility to receive and review Job Orders to ensure they are free of deficiencies prior to the filing of H-2A applications with DOL.
6. AWC anticipates that compliance with the Rule will cause an increase in workload, obligations, and costs, including hiring and training additional staff, for which AWC does not have funding and the Rule does not provide any additional resources or funding.

Signed this the 13th day of June 2024.

DECLARATION OF DANILO CABRERA

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I, DANILO CABRERA, hereby declare under penalty of perjury that the following facts are true and correct to the best of my knowledge, based on my personal knowledge and information:

1. My name is Danilo Cabrera and my business address is 317 W. Main St., Boise, Idaho 83735. I am over the age of eighteen, have personal knowledge of the subject matter, and am competent to testify concerning the matters in this declaration.

2. I have served as the Bureau Chief at the Idaho Department of Labor, an agency of the State of Idaho (IDOL) since 2021. I have a bachelor's degree from the University of California Los Angeles. My job responsibilities include overseeing IDOL workforce service staff's review of employer requests for foreign labor (Job Orders) prior to submission of foreign labor applications to the United States Department of Labor (USDOL) for certification.

3. I am submitting this declaration in support of Plaintiffs' Complaint for Declaratory and Injunctive relief as to a Final Rule, published by USDOL on April 29, 2024, titled "Improving Protections for Workers in Temporary Agricultural Employment in the United States,” (89 Fed. Reg. 33,898) (effective June 28, 2024) (Final Rule).

4. Pursuant to the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, employers who wish to employ foreign workers must apply to USDOL for certification before the foreign workers can receive H-2A employment visas. Applicants must first submit a Job Order to the applicable State Workforce Agency for approval prior to submission of an H-2A Application to USDOL for certification.

5. IDOL is Idaho’s State Workforce Agency for purposes of reviewing Job Orders. It is IDOL’s responsibility to receive and review Job Orders to ensure they are free of deficiencies prior to the filing of H-2A applications with USDOL.

6. An experienced IDOL staff member must review every job order associated with a request for H-2A visas for compliance with federal and state regulations.

7. For fiscal year 2023, there were 603 Idaho agribusinesses that applied for 7,447 H-2A visas, associated with 938 unique job orders. In the last two fiscal years (2021-2022), the number of employers requesting H-2A visas has grown by nearly 22.5% with a 15.95% increase in job orders and a 10.8% increase in the number of requested visas. With the aging-out of current domestic agricultural employees and a shortage of domestic workers to fill the vacancies, the number of clearance orders is anticipated to continue to grow.

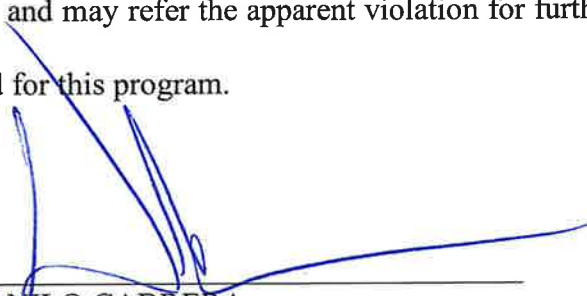

8. The additional duties and requirements created by the Final Rule will require IDOL to dedicate more time and resources to review H-2A employers for federal compliance.

9. The Final Rule would require IDOL to update its standard operating procedures and policies relating to review of Job Orders. IDOL personnel would also need to be trained on the changes required by the Final Rule.

10. The Final Rule would impose an immediate and increased monitoring burden on IDOL, which must scrutinize applications for H-2A visas against a USDOL list of debarred employers, and to begin a sometimes burdensome process for severing Employment Services (ES) services to debarred employers.

11. Under the final rule, if an employer fails to comply with reporting the delay in start dates, the agency must file an apparent violation and may refer the apparent violation for further review, which increases the IDOL staff workload for this program.

DATED This the 13 day of June 2024.
